The Need For A Day Centres

The UK is ageing rapidly, which is heralding a big increase in the number of people with dementia. Government, councils, providers and users are in agreement that the next few decades will bring severe new pressures for the social care system, particularly as the population ages.

The numbers

- There are over 11 million elderly people in the United Kingdom, according to the most recent census.
- £17bn is spent on care and informal care on dementia every year in the UK.
- More than 680,000 people have the condition. It is estimated numbers will rise to almost 950,000 by 2021, and more than 1.7 million by 2051.
- Sixty-eight per cent of people with dementia are aged over 80.
- Thirty-six per cent live in residential care.
- Just £7 of public funding per citizen is spent on dementia research per year compared with £52 in the US.

Professional elderly care is needed in every community, from small towns to large cities. The need for day care is expected to increase as even greater numbers of elderly people in the United Kingdom rise each year. At the heart of this challenge is dementia, since it mainly affects the over-65s and its prevalence increases with age.

The AH Trust is a non-profit and caring organisation, a charity formed to primarily build and design advanced ultra modern Day Centres to improve the quality of life for those suffering dementia.

Fundraising

In 2007, we decided that Corporate Support was the best way forward, and classical examples of sustainable partnerships are built on creative thinking rather than a 'handout mentality' and as such they deliver benefits to both sides.
